More than 70 years after its founding, NATO remains an indispensable alliance — the ultimate guarantee of security for its 30 members from Europe and North America. Now, the recent war in Ukraine, showed that the global balance of power is shifting, with his neighbor country, is proving to that Russia is push-back against the rules-based international order. Both of these two Eastern countries are not part of NATO, and recently, as the war's development are ongoing, the Ukrainian President Zelensky, has kept begging for his NATO's memberships, for months.....

As the 4th round of talks have been held between Russia and Ukraine's delegation, the Ukrainian president Zelensky, revealed today a glimmer of hope, estimating that the positions were now "more realistic" and accepting the evidence vis-à-vis his a strong SOS call for NATO to grant Ukraine a fast-track membership to ensure the security of his country, by the North Atlantic Alliance "it takes even more time for decisions to be in the interest of Ukraine. " He also made a gesture towards Moscow, saying he was ready to renounce any membership of his country in NATO, a casus belli for Russia. It may be the end of this dream, which ends with this membership in NATO, as he was able to paraphrase Martin Luther King, in front of the US Congress, today "I have a Dream". The alliance is now facing another range of other security challenges, due to the threats from Russia towards other border countries, such as Poland, Moldavia, Georgia, the latter have reentry applied for a fast track membership at European Union, for getting protection. Amongst the military threats, there is also a risk of sophisticated cyber-attacks, nuclear proliferation, and teahouse of chemical weapons arising from Russia, during this period of turmoil, nearby.
